viewed religion as a false belief system. He acknowledges that religion played a role in the development of civilization by restraining the anti-social and destructive tendencies of humans, thus making it possible for large populations to live together in relative peace. The Future of an

The Future of an Illusion in 1927 for the purpose of enlightening readers on with his analysis of the psychological operation of religious belief on society. The underlying, overarching thrust of this analysis is one of Freud's most deeply despondent summations of the inherent qualities applicable to the entire human race: homo sapiens stubbornly and steadfastly commit to a pattern of rejecting attempts to penetrate down to the core of harsh truth about themselves.
